ECONOMY

1966: Booming But Look Out. Editorial warns against inflation though noting top form-of U.S. economy (details) as a result of Kennedy, Johnson Administration measures; sees rising prices, high employment and lagging productivity as danger signals; and notes nation may face tax increase if defense spending continues to rise, * 7 Ja 4. Inflation Requires Action Now. Editorial discusses increasing inflation and the exuberance of the economy, due in large part to the Vietnam war effort; notes that higher bank interest rates and larger Social Security deductions have not curbed credit and expansion sufficiently; strongly urges President Johnson to take immediate steps, such as stopping industry's investment credits, raising corporate and personal income taxes and reducing non-essential government spending, * 1 Ap 4

Inflation? Text discusses President Johnson's most pressing domestic issue, inflation;

The Field Marshal Directs a Voluble War of Persusaion. Hugh Sidey reports on President Johnson's personal attack on inflation by which he hopes to curb' the overheating of the economy, thus avoiding a tax increase in an election year, p. PRES 29 Ap 36B

Be Sensible about the Economy. Editorial views recent anxiety about the state of U.S. economy as badly overstated and overpublicized; criticizes Johnson administration's confusing statements on the degree of inflation and chance of a tax hike as well as actual policies and reminds that the public should realize a slight fluctuation in a fundamentally healthy economy is, so far, nothing to panic about, *27 My 4

L.B.J. and His Splintered 'Guideposts, Editorial sees attempts to prevent inflation by so called 'quideposts' as weak and unsuccessful (examples); notes businessmen's leeriness and labor's resentment of guideposts which the Council of Economic Advisers has set at an unrealistic 3.2% for wage increases; sees Johnson as acting more like a Congressman than a president in respect to tax increases and budget, *19 Ag

Takes More Cash to Make Ends Meet. Photos and Walter Heller's answers to pertinent questions focus on the current inflationary trend of the economy which has made food higher priced, and upset the stock market, p., c.p., chart 9 S 26-31

L.B.J. Populist versus L.B.J. Entrepreneur. LABOR

An Intolerable Strike, Editorial scores Michael Quill's Transnort Workers Union strike in N.Y., called illegally and to the detriment of millions; adds that the public has little defense against such actions and that the city should break the strike by any means possible since the union forfed districts by acting irresponsibly, *14 Ja 4 Transit Union Gets a Half Nelson on New York, Photo essay and text reveal the havoe caused in New York City by the Transport Workers Union's illegal strike, led by Michael Quill forcing millions who normally use subways and buses to find other ways to get to work, p. 14 Ja 28-34B
Roger Vaughan reviews causes, effects and protagonists in a teachers', strike at New York's St. John's University, led by Father

Peter O'Reilly, two groups of unionized teachers are demanding academic freedom and are opposed by President Joseph Canhill and Rev. Joseph Tinnelly. Students are protesting both sides, want classes resumed, p. NF 21 Jā 308-30C

The Spectacle New Yorkers Hope Never to See Again. Photos spotlight immense traffic jams in New York City during the Transport Workers Union's strike of public transportation, which is finally settled at great cost to_the city, p., c.p. 21 Ja 62D-67

The New Boy Survives a Hazing. Guest columnist John K. Jessup discusses the transistrike which greeted John Lindsay as Mayor of New York City, noting that it was almost inevitable because old union-City Hall relationships were broken by a new Republican administration, hostile to usual bargaining deals, *28 Ja 17

Jim Crow in Building Unions. Editorial decries discrimination in building trade unions against Negroes; statistics from Labor Dept. survey prove the point but union officials claim that few Negroes apply for openings and most who do apply fail the exams, valid claims since Negroes don't bother to apply knowing the union is closed to them and they do fail the exams because the quality of their education is generally poorer, but unions have an obligation to look for and help Negroes to be members, *18 F 4

Getting Upstaged by the Union Wasn't in the Scenario. Hugh Sidey reports on President Johnson's spectacular handling of his achievements, an ability he recently demonstrated in getting the airline strike settled, only to be outdone by the union members who voted not to accept the contract which L.B.J. had arranged, p. PRES 12 Ag 32
Why Tolerate the Excesses of Unions. Editorial describes evils in the current collective bargaining system, advocates reform by giving more power to the President in handling emergency strikes and less monopoly power to unions. The strike menace (past year's strikes noted) and labor's contribution to inflation would be best contribution. Forces within the market itself and flexibility in our laws should allow these to work freely for the public Crippling strikes hit hard at U.S. consumers disrupting travel as Machinists Union strikes against five airlines, extraordinary demands of unions finally spell the end of the New York Herald Tribune. Jimmy Breslin discusses Tribune's demise. Barry Farrell's textpiece examines labor leaders today. Takeout profiles union organizer Jerry Wurf who wants to unionize city and county employes, p. 26 Ag 24-36B

ROMAN EMPIRE
The Románs
Part I. Photo essay by Gjon Mili with accompanying text spotlights Ancient Rome and its heritage of lawful rule which spread throughout its vast empire. Takeout by Jozefa Stuart discusses the prevalence of slavery, a shameful aspect of an otherwise civilized era. Remaining architecture and sculpture represent Rome and the Romans in their devotion to law and order, their ancestors and the status quo, p., c.p., c.cov. 4 Mr 56-77
Part II: The 1300 Years. Ancient Rome's 13 turbulent centuries are reviewed in Edward Kern's text and in drawings and maps that illustrate the great events and trace the course of Rome's history from its beginnings as a Republic to expansion as an empire and demise; Piranesi's etchings show Rome's impressive ruins: Basilica of Maxentius, Castel Sant' Angelo, Arch of Titus, Colosseum, Capitoline Wolf, c.p., c.d., r., c.r. 11 Mr 36-60
Part III: Julius Caesar. Luigi Barzini's textpiece explores the genius of Julius Caesar who achieved his power by clever scheming most notably on the battlefield and in any other pursuit he chose to follow. Drawings by Arthur Lidov illustrate the brilliant skills of Ancient Romans in warfare and engineering; various sculptures present likenesses of Caesar, head of Pompey whom Caesar defeated at Pharsalus, p., c.p., c.d. 18 Mr 50-79
Part IV: The Whispers of Pompeii. Photo cssay by Carlo Bavagnoli on Pompeii, a typical provincial Roman town buried by volcanic ash in 79 A.D., shows sculpture, frescoee and other items against backdrops of streets and houses; text by Robin Espinosa relates pillage of art after 18th Century rediscovery, subsequent archaeological excavation which has revealed the ordinary lives of the people and horror of the disaster. p., c.p. 25 Mr 56-73
Part V: The Caesars. Photo essay by Gjon Mili and accompanying text profiles the geniuses, madmen and saints who ruled Ancient Rome: Augustus, Tiberius, Nero, Trajan, Hadrian and Marcus Aurelius whose Meditations (except
